The first number of the Edmonton Herald, Wm. Short editor, arrived on Monday's train from Calgary. The Herald is an eight page paper, five columns to the page and is chiefly a reprint of the Calgary Herald. It remarks editorially: "Alberta First" will, therefore, be a rallying cry for the Herald. In the wider field the Herald will be broadly conservative in its views, but at this point it may be stated that the air of Alberta contains too much ozone to be conducive to subservience to party feel'ch. Heretofore the political situation has been discussed in Edmonton from one standpoint only; its discussion from an opposite point of view will at least have the merit of making known both sides of the question."

The Herald is more creditable as a Calgary production than as an Edmonton enterprise.

PROFESSOR VAN GOTHEN, editor of the "Gazet Van Antwerpen" one of the leading papers in the great seaport and commercial capital of Belgium, having a daily circulation of 140,000, arrived on Monday's train to look up the capabilities and advantages of the Edmonton district and report the same to his paper. Mr. Van Goethem is interested in a Belgian company which commenced operations at St. Albert some years ago, with a view to starting several industries, agricultural and connected with agriculture, namely sheep ranching, woolen mill, grist mill, tannery, chicory raising. His present trip is with a view of looking over the ground to see whether an extension of the operations of the company to the limits of their original plans is justified or not. His impressions of the country are very favorable, but the railway rates rather stagger him. Being told that these high rates were only an incident in a certain stage of the progress of a new country and that as the country filled up they would necessarily give place to more moderate charges; he said that he admitted the possibility and even the probability of this being the case, but he could not admit that it was a certainty. He will visit St. Albert where the operations of the company have been carried on and form an opinion of the district generally before returning to Europe.

A communication was received from Miss Martin regarding the teaching of calisthenics in the higher departments of the public school.

Cameron—McCauley moved that the secretary write the superintendent of education asking when the inspector is likely to visit the school.

Lauder—McCauley moved that Messrs. Bellamy and Cameron be a committee to interview the agent of the Methodist mission property as to a school site at the old Methodist mission house; and the agent of the David McDougall estate as to a site on the front of that estate.

FROM JASPER HOUSE.

D. E. NOYES arrived from White Mud lake near the Jasper house on Thursday last. He left there on April 23rd, and made a quick trip as the rivers were mostly low. The past winter was one of deep snow in and near the Mountains. At White Mud lake it was four feet deep. At the same time in the Jasper pass there was no snow until February. Then it fell about four inches deep, which was the deepest it had been in the valley for years. Small game was plentiful and the fur trade was good. One Indian killed 12 moose. The health of the Indians was good and horses wintered well. A report is current that coarse gold has been found by an Indian on a small tributary of the Fraser in the Mountains, and Jack Graham and one of Mr. Noyes' sons are now prospecting for it. The grains of gold are said to be from a pin head to a pea in size. Pierre Grey was trading during the winter at the Fishing lake 30 miles north of the Athabasca and will go to Smoky river before coming out with his fur. Mr. Noyes returns west this week and will be out in June with his fur as well as Pierre Grey. Mr. Noyes met Purches and party one day out from lake St. Ann.

FIRES.

It was hoped that the rain on Monday, April 19th, would have effectually stopped forest and prairie fires this spring. But it did not do so. For the past week the timbered country along the Beaver hills from Edmonton to Fort Saskatchewan has had many fires which must have caused the destruction of thousands of dollars worth of fencing and building timber and firewood. There is plenty of timber in this region at the present time, and where a settler chooses to take up a claim on which there is a large amount of timber no one need grudge him the privilege of cutting down and burning up what is necessary to give him the area of arable land that he requires. This would still leave plenty of timber for all purposes. But there is the greatest objection to the destruction of 100 or 1,000 acres as the case may be of good wood for the sake of the settler having greater ease in bringing ten, twenty, fifty or even one hundred acres of land under crop. The fire which is started to burn the settlers' brush heaps may and often does spread over the surrounding lands to the utter destruction of the timber growth. The worst of the matter is that many settlers look upon this wholesale destruction of timber as something commendable, and to the advantage of the country in making more land available for easy settlement. If the country were entirely timbered as Ontario was there might be some excuse for this view. But it is not so timbered. There is no solid timber of any great area. There are openings suitable for farming in all but the very densest timber. Even in the parts of the country that are open only a very small per centage of the land is actually cultivated, so that there is no necessity for destroying the timber wholesale in order to get sufficient farming land. On the other hand it is to the presence of timber in considerable bodies in this Edmonton district that we owe the lesser winds and greater moisture and consequent better growth of vegetation that we enjoy over other parts of the Territories. Every tree that is destroyed unnecessarily reduces our favorable conditions by just that much. The actual needs of the country will reduce the local timber supply and thereby make an unfavorable change in our climatic conditions fast enough without our uselessly destroying this the most valuable of our natural resources. The large body of broken timbered country known as the Beaver hills is what protects the Saskatchewan valley in the vicinity of Edmonton from the sweep of the winds of the eastern and southern prairies and renders it the most fertile and productive section of the Northwest. Burning the timber off those hills as is now being done year after year as rapidly as fire will do it means an ultimate deterioration in agricultural value of every farm in this district. Not only are those who will need in a few years to use this timber that is now being destroyed, being injured by the fires, but every owner of every foot of land throughout the district as well. The lands department has a regulation which permits the withdrawal from homestead entry of any quarter section having a certain amount of timber on it. This is done no doubt with a view of preserving the timber—but it has the contrary effect. If the homesteader is allowed to take up a certain timbered quarter section, he will only clear as much of it as he requires to plow. This he will clear where the timber is smallest and therefore of least value, and he will have a direct financial interest in preserving the good standing timber from the action of fire. But if a settler is debarred from taking the place of his choice because there is timber on it he certainly does not feel any particular interest in protecting that timber which was in his way then and perhaps now hinders a neighbor from settling on that piece of land. When the government makes a regulation which necessarily clashes with the wishes and interests of the settlers, special means should be provided to see that the results desired shall be attained. It is useless to protect the timber by keeping the settler off the timbered quarter section if the fire is allowed to sweep it away. What should be done in this country would be to allow any settler to take up any quarter section he pleased, so that he would only destroy what timber he required and would protect the rest; and to provide numerous and active police patrols during the seasons when fires will run, in all sections of the country in which fires are frequent and there is timber to be protected. In this prairie country of the Northwest the timber of the partly timbered areas has an especial value which makes it worthy of the most strenuous exertions of the government to secure its protection.

Moose Jaw Times:—The County of Quebec West has to its everlasting shame endorsed McGreevy's hoodluming, and when the hoodler again takes his seat in Parliament Canada as a nation will have practically volunteered to share McGreevy's infamy and McGreevy's punishment. By forever expelling McGreevy from office of public trust, and by securing for him adequate punishment, Canada would have spared herself the infamy. Whether she could have altogether escaped the punishment is not so certain. Even now the interest on the sum of his hoodluming is being paid in taxes and tariffs by the people. Who can say when the evil of his example will be eradicated? He has woefully corrupted and blinded one whole constituency; he was a party to debauching at least one spending department of government; his case was the means of bending the department of Justice to political exigency; and it seems that the Dominion of Canada is about to become or has even now become his partner in crime. Of this we may be certain, "as we sow so shall we also reap." If we allow hoodlers to have a voice in our councils, to have a vote in the control of our expenditures, we may rest assured that our rulers will be corrupted, that our resources will be rifled, and that our moneys will be boddled with a vengeance. We call upon Sir Mackenzie Bowell, the first citizen of Canada, to whom the honor and credit of his country should be the dearest possession, to move through Mr. Foster, has leader in the Commons, for the permanent expulsion from Parliament of the Hon. Thos. McGreevy, Thief.
